DIARY NOTES

2. I contacted the Chaplain of the Senate in Miami Beach and he agreed to give the invocation and the benediction at the Cornerstone Ceremony. I also talked to Mr. Floete, Administrator, General Services Administration, to insure that he would be available for the Ceremony. I was unable to reach Mr. Wallace, the new Public Buildings Service Commissioner, but talked to his Deputy, Mr. Knott, who said he was sure that Mr. Wallace would be present and participate if necessary.

4. Major [REDACTED] United States Army (Retired), was in to see me about a position. I told him that there were no prospects in CIA but that, in any case, since he had a Masters' Degree in Business Administration I thought that he would be better off financially in private industry. He had, in fact, arrived at the same conclusion and was about to accept a position which he had just been offered.

5. I talked to Dr. Tietjen about the case of [REDACTED] His record 25X1A9a seemed quite complete in this case and he and Mr. [REDACTED] were both emphatic that they 25X1A9a had not approved orally of her entry into the JOT Program.

6. I spent an hour with [REDACTED] of the Inspector General's office discussing "career services." In general I got the impression that they felt the DD/S Career Services were being fairly well run. They were particularly complimentary

8. [REDACTED] was in to see me:

a. He would like to make a five-minute presentation at the November Senior Staff Meeting concerning "records disposition."

b. I agreed with him that we would designate [REDACTED] as the DD/S 25X1A9a representative on the Mechanical Translation Committee. He is very much concerned about this Project since there appears to be at least thirteen other research projects outside of CIA doing the same thing. I told him that I thought I would pass this along to Lyman Kirkpatrick who had looked into this Project from an Inspector General's point of view.

c. I also discussed with him the desirability of organizing a "feasibility team" to study the application of electronic data processing equipment in the DD/I Area. I agreed to set up an appointment sometime soon with Bob Amory to discuss this matter.
